Reviews

This ebook is worth acquiring. Better then never, though i am quite late in start reading this one. You will not truly feel monotony at at any time of your own time (that's what catalogues are for about if you ask me).

Excerpt: . . . from a despatch of Captain Sir Everard Home, of her Majestys ship North Star, who visited Port Essington last year. The settlement at Port Essington stands upon a rising ground on the west side of the harbour, elevated about fifty feet, in the highest part, above high water mark, the soil being a conglomerate of red-stone and sand, which from its dryness evidently conduces to the healthiness for which it is remarkable. The extent between the northwardmost building, which is the hospital, and the Government House, which stands south of it, is 590 paces; and from the waters edge to the western extent is 370 paces. The settlement of Victoria stands upon partially cleared ground, and consists of the Government House, which is built of wood, and has a shingle roof; the hospital, which is a building of the same description, which has a kitchen behind it, built of stone, but unfinished; there is a mess room, to which is attached the quarters of the second officer in command of the garrison; the space under it is used as the store-room of the officers; there is another building also of a similar description, 116 SETTLEMENT OF VICTORIA, the upper part of which forms the quarters of the store-keeper and linguist, the lower part of which is the spirit room; there are three good store-houses, one of which is the ordnance store; the foundation being of brick work, the sides of wood. The roofs of...
